Comments: Aloha,

I want to preface this by saying that TSV has faced enough drastic change in the last few + years, a lot of changes that have already affected the locals. TSV is changing, the world is changing no one is going to argue that, however, we need to continue to be conscious of our effects on the environment. It is of utmost importance to receive a proper EIS before you continue with any further building and expansion of TSV.

I no longer live in Taos, but often come back to visit family, ski and admire the beauty and charm that is becoming few and far between with the gentrification of what used to be.

My brother was born there and my parents were long time residents and avid backcountry skiers,

I am concerned for the future of TSV. The space and the infrastructure that can exist need to stay equivalent to the amount of resources available and not strive to exceed what is sustainable. Please be pono and take care of Taos Ski Valley, rather than turn it into something it is not able to sustain because of your greed.

Respect the environment and it's natural capacity for human growth.
