Comments: The ski valleys water infrastructure is already unstable, this past season there was a water distribution failure. A long line of folks have been reliant on the Rio Hondo watershed, this roots deeper than people just missing out on showers from city water lines. There's a community that cares for their water ways each moment they are flowing, this water feeds the community, brings it together~ a community who tends their water in such respect deserves to be not only heard but deeply supported by any service that claims to have the lands health at top of their priorities. This community is an integral part of the land. Please have their well being, your neighbors access to water in mind foremost. Stable water infrastructure has got to be in place light years before a 5 million gallon tank should be considered for a recreational attraction.
