Comments: In the end, people will not be warring against each other for the sake of fossil fuels, or gold. Human beings can survive without either of those. In the end times, people will go to war over clean water. Too many people (especially in the upper basins) take clean water for granted. Looking into the future, we need to weigh our decisions against one parameter, is this moving us away from or toward a clean water future. We don't need more gold, we need more clean water.
