

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 6/9/2023 12:07:22 AM

First name: Phillip

Last name: Jagelski

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Boom or bust, mining is not new to the Black Hills. If and when digging starts and ends what is left behind is the remnants of what was natural. I don't believe reclaiming the used land would add any value or compensation to the people who live in the affected areas. The only parties that would profit off this proposal is the mining companies while stealing the recreational value these claimed areas have on tourism, which is money brought in and repurposed to fund the state of South Dakota and our local way of life. This benefits no one that lives in South Dakota