Comments: Given the scope both in acreage, variety of eco systems affected, and the latitude given contractors for decisions around timber removal I would ask that if this restoration project is approved the forest service institute frequent reviews of the work as it progresses, and develop partnerships with focus groups in the community who also are likely to be monitoring this project to ensure established "firewalls" are built into the monitoring process to stop work on the project for both violations of how the contract is being implemented and also to have the ability to stop work for unanticipated/unrecognized environmental impacts that occur as the project proceeds.
