Comments: As a senior I do not think a lot of our regulating agencies. For many years we hear over and over about the dangerous contamination left behind from various companies and always after the fact. It has the appearance of allowing profit without much thought to the environment. You would think the agencies would have learned to have much tighter regulation and oversight. The companies make their money and somehow through bankruptcy or poor rules and regulations just walk away. These are some of our biggest companies. Why not make them put enough money aside say in escrow for cleanup that cannot be touched by said company. Or legislation to prevent their company from ever doing business in the US again (under any name). Our environment is very important to protect. All the analysis is wasted if viewed with profit in mind. There are life forms and people everywhere that need protection. Please support the strongest environmental reasons to protect the Pactola Reservoir Rapid Creek Watershed in North Dakota.
