Comments: Our National Forests are a legacy that we cannot violate. They were set aside by our parents and grandparents to ensure that there would still be natural areas for future generations to enjoy and this must be upheld as a sacred trust. Regardless of race, creed or whatever other qualifier you choose, natural habitats are necessary for all life on the planet to survive and must be safeguarded for our ecology to function. If we are to survive as a species we need more, rather than less natural area on our world.
