Comments: The Black Hills are the most sacred place to Plains Natives, not only that, but the Pactola Reservoir feeds the watersheds that provide water to thousands of men, women, and children. Without the water and the land, we have nothing! We truly need to think about what kind of world we're leaving for future generations, because at the rate we're going, there will be no future! The Black Hills and Pactola are the most important environmental factors to South Dakota, and if the Black Hills are destroyed any further, there will no longer be a beautiful place called Sputh Dakota, because stripping the Hills of anymore resources will truly kill what's left. Please don't let this happen.
