Comments: Greetings,

I have lived in Montana my entire life and snowmobiled as long as I can remember. I'm all for shared use and believe in conservation, but year after year riding areas have been closed off. Wilderness study areas that do not meet the definition of a wilderness sit in limbo keeping hard working Americans from using the public land that is intended for everyone to enjoy. Motorized over the snow travel has no lasting impact on the land. All the track and evidence are melted away each spring. Animals that live in the area during the warm months, hibernate or migrate out of the area when it is covered in feet of snow during the winter.

I hope you consider a plan that does not just benefit the anti motorized groups and continue to keep public lands open for all to enjoy.
