Comments: Designated wilderness is no place for what John Muir called "hooves locusts". He called them such for good reason. Most likely, these very same ranchers that are sucking off the Federal teat, are complaining about the fact that we even have a government in the first place.

A blind man can tell that sheep devour everything in their path. Do not allow these destructive animals on our SHARED lands. It's my wilderness too. I should have just as much, if not more say than someone who simply wants to extract what they can get from it, damned the effects.
