Comments: This use of the High Uintas does not align with the needs of the natural landscape. The grazing easements should be retired, and the ranchers compensated accordingly. If grazing is allowed to continue, the natural wildlife should NOT be controlled for the rancher's benefit. In the long run, a no-grazing policy (again, with appropriate compensation for the current ranchers) is best for the land, wildlife, natural vegetation, and the future users of this beautiful part of our country.
