

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 8/22/2023 8:25:50 PM

First name: bob

Last name: Bartlett

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Domestic sheep grazing in wildernesses can cause harm to native species. Wilderness areas are fragile, Sheep grazing can ruin wilderness food, water, availability for the native species that exist there. If grazing is permitted it should be tightly controlled. Any harm to the native species existing there should result in quickly stopping the sheep grazing until the preservation of the natural species is protected.