Comments: I support the no grazing option as the best option for the wildlife, watersheds, recreation, and the Wilderness.

Allowing domestic livestock to graze in the High Uintas Wilderness damages its lakes and streams and is a threat to the recovery of native Bighorn sheep and other wild species. It also encourages the killing of native predators to protect domestic sheep. It is incompatible with the purpose of wilderness. If it is allowed at all, it should be limited so as to not compete with wildlife for food or space or to spread disease to native species.
