Let's stop over grazing these areas with domestic farm sheep. We need to rethink the grazing allowed by domestic animals on our wilderness areas. The animals that live in the wilderness are losing habitat they need with the human build going on all around them.

If eliminating the sheep is not an option, at least cut the area used by half so the wild area can reestablish itself and allow big horn sheep, and other animals to use the area to come back successfully.

I do not like that we, as humans invade this space for business, and then when a herd animal is killed by a wild animal. the wild animal is eliminated or at least to blame, when actually, if the domestic animals were not there to begin with, there would be no problem for the owners and the land being used. Educate the farmers. Not the wild life.

thanks,
