Comments: I raised Navajo/Churro sheep and can tell you that they eat as much as My Scottish Highland cow. I had to alternate pastures so it could recover and the sheep devastated the Scotch pine farm eating bark. Now, they were fed 4th cutting alfalfa and did not lack in food so I can't imagine the damage done in a wilderness area. I thought we were restoring these fragile ranges and there needs to be management that can do this. We are stewards of the land. The Big Horn Sheep is a vulnerable species having many predators and Please don't wipe them out by putting domestic sheep there. Shepherders are known to chase wildlife away from water and sheepdog are predators. The worse predator is Man.

Thank You,

Betty Davies
