Comments: My family grazed sheep in the Big Horn Mountains of Wyoming in the 1960's and some of my fondest memories are of traipsing about horseback or afoot moving my family's sheep. I've never lost my love for the high country, remain active with hunting, fishing, exploring and discovering Wyoming's high country. What has changed is my knowledge that grazing can and does have major detrimental effects on Wyoming's wildlife populations, particularly our bighorn sheep, and will here ask you to severely restrict the grazing of domestic sheep in these very alpine environments. Please adopt your Alternative 1 and keep these ecosystems intact.

Thank you,
Roger Shanor
