Comments: The 455,000-acre High Uintas Wilderness forms the core of the Uintas mountains. It should be a haven for native Rocky Mountain bighorn sheep. Instead, the range is full of livestock (domestic sheep) that can carry disease & ruin the landscape, the watersheds, the lakes, & streams. It degrades the visitors seeking the peaceful wilderness experience. I support "no grazing". The wilderness should be preserved. Man always has to interfere with Nature. Please keep it pristine. When it's gone, it is gone forever. Thank you
