Comments: "The White Mountain National Forest last revised its management plan in 2005, and climate change was given scant attention at the time. The scientific consensus on the threat of climate change and its impacts has increased exponentially in the years since. Forest Plans are required by law to be revised after 15 years. How can the public trust a Forest Plan that was developed without regard to climate change?" - Copied from God knows where in the Clear Cutting description universe.

As a retired registered Landscape Architect, I object to what the Forest Service is proposing to do.
