Comments: As someone who spends a lot of time in the forests of the GYE, the healthiest sections are the ones that have been without interference from man. Removing smaller trees, brush, deteriorating trees, etc just prolongs the inevitable and also displaces so much wildlife, thus breaking down the balance of the forest. Fires are part of that balancing act and keep forests healthy. I think the funds could be used much more wisely to catch up on backlogged infrastructure for NF, which will create a better experience for those using the forests regularly. Thanks for listening.
