Comments: No. This is a proposal looking for a problem. "Wolverine maternal and primary habitats" is a vague generalization that could mean virtually anywhere. The same is true for the USFG's term "big game winter range" and "habitat;" which potentially and actually does include private lands. Is there a real threat to the species of ungulates and white bark pines (more than any other tree or shrub) currently? There is no serious purported conflict between snowmobilers and cross country skiers; requiring this action. This all smells of Agenda 21 and 30 x 30. It needs to stop.
