Comments: I have already commented and will continue to do so that the grizzly bear should be immediately delisted to allow Montana and the other states so impacted to manage their populations responsibility and logically as done with great success with other big game species such as the wolf, moose, elk, etc., etc. This particular project/subject to me is a further misguided plan to lend credence to the fallacy that the grizzly bear is still 'endangered.' It is almost weekly, certainly monthly, that news breaks that another 'endangered grizzly bear' has come in conflict, in some manner, with us humans. How many deaths or encounters are acceptable, how many lives of grizzly bears or people, must be altered forever before enough is enough?!?! There are already thousands of acres (if not millions) set-aside as wilderness. Forest Service roads are already blocked off for public use, these roads once opened for all taxpayers to recreate as we see fit (yes 'we the people' own the public forests). I implore we either sue the groups advocating for this nonsense or engage with our elected officials to immediately delist the grizzly bear!!!
