Comments: How is it that with the ever-shrinking window to deal with the climate crisis, further logging of mature or old-growth trees is still being considered? Substantial forests are the ONLY scalable solution that we know of to seriously address the planetary carbon imbalance. The only real solution we have is to keep the trees standing.

Do we have to wait until the flood waters take our homes or we're engulfed in wildfires to have the USFS finally accept that the remaining tracts such as the White Mountain National Forest's Lost River are worth more standing than on a logging truck headed for a mill or, worse yet, a biomass plant. Because if we do, sadly, it'll be much too late.

I respectfully request that all proposed, planned or ongoing logging be stopped and the trees left standing, now and in the future - in accordance with the Biden Administration's Executive Order. Now, before it is too late.
