Comments: Camping and hiking permits are long overdue for this fabulous area! We camped at Lower Blue Lake in September 2019 and every time I attempted to dig a BIFF (bathroom in forest floor) I encountered toilet paper a few inches below the soil. Few people are really going to pack out their feces, and there is no way to enforce this even if it becomes a regulation. Yet something must be done soon to prevent our beautiful high country camps from becoming giant human litter boxes. We would like to suggest that the possibility of a pit toilet being constructed at each lake be explored. These could be volunteer created and maintained, filled in when full, and successive ones dug as they become full.
