Comments: I just want to add to the opposition to this proposal- bad idea! I'm an avid mountain biker, and also love motorized/powerful trail riding and off-roading; there are places that are appropriate for each. I definitely don't want our current single-track trail system overrun any more than it already is- it's crazy out there. You know you're already struggling to manage the situation everywhere.

Adding all these people, lots of them not knowing what they're doing, is pretty much a recipe for disaster. Mountain biking without power is already a dangerous sport. Seriously, there are going to be wrecks- lots of them.

Plus, it would definitely change the character of all the trails here, and not for the better. I'm all for some own-hilling one-way trails- I love them. But allowing our existing trail system to be transformed in the way suggested is seriously bad planning.

Put in some new trails in dirt bike zones that are open to powered bikes- but don't add them in with hikers and all the other users! DO NOT set this precedent, you won't be able to undo it.

Sincerely,

Perrin Hunt
