

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 11/16/2023 5:30:37 PM

First name: Marty

Last name: Harrison

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Buring is very serious no matter what way it's done. I understand the need for it now and then but it should always be thought through completely. My home sits on 5 acres and most is covered it many types of trees. When fall comes it's a living hell to work with. I'm basically on the side of a small mountain and the rear of my property drops offs steeply. I've been 18 years and we either have to mulch the leaf's and move them to other areas., or we rake/blow them down the embankment to which has been covered for decades. This all is very dangerous! FIRES! the slightest spark could take everything, and we couldn't do a thing! With that being said it's the same with what you're wanting to do. I know in places it has to be done and thinks underneath can flourish again.

But there is animals in on and all around there is plant life that won't survive, then there is the smoke and MANY other factors that just make it more than a WHAT IF to a disaster.