Comments: Please allow the areas designated Wilderness in the Sequoia and Sierra National Forests to recover from fire naturally. They have already been burned and should not be burned further. The trees and other plants that sprout up naturally will be the strongest and best fit to survive the area and ecosystem where they sprout. Let natural selection take place. This is extremely important in this era of changing climate conditions. It is obvious that humans do not know best, so manipulation of these ecosystems by humans will not result in the strongest combination of plants sprouting.
