Comments: Regarding the plans to use controlled burns in Wilderness Areas. While I understand the concern for wildfires in California, I must remind you that the Wilderness Act prohibits such activity. We must allow nature to retain control; not humans. Last summer, we re-visited a Wilderness area in Utah that had burned after our first camping trip. It was already healing itself. While well-intentioned, your plan is a dangerous precedent for the management of these areas. Please do not move forward with this plan
