Comments: I am an ardent supporter of wilderness in all of its forms with special emphasis being put on wilderness in its purest form. With that being said the fixed protection on climbing routes is not an issue in the nations wilderness areas. If these are determined to be a "permanent instalation" then hiking trails and signs are most certainly in the same category. Trails are in reality a feature that greatly detracts from a wilderness experience for all users. It is in yhe publics best interest for allow for continued instalation of fixed, hand drilled climbing bolt instalation in the nations wilderness areas.
