Comments: To whom this may concern,

Please allow climbers to continue to self regulate our recreation. We do not need government input on how to bolt or what is safe. We have industry standards and practices. We also assume there is inherent risk with our sport and prepare for less than ideal situations. For instance, i carry a climbers bolt wrench in case I come me across a lose bolt. Or many climbers like myself carry a 'bail beaner' in case we find a carabineer that has been worn and needs replaced. We, as climbers, regulate our sport either individually or threw climbing associations. We do not need a federal organization to be bogged down to inspect anchors. Every climber. Every climb. Inspects the route. We do it for ourselves and each other.
