

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 11/23/2023 10:56:28 AM

First name: Ryan

Last name: Strickland

Organization:

Title:

Comments: By removing the ability to place anchors into rock faces, you are only endangering the lives of people who enjoy the climbing areas in national parks. Rock climbing has been around since the founding of our country but it has only been able to be enjoyed safely for the past few decades, causing a boom in the use of our outdoor areas. By restricting anchor points, you are only taking an action that people now do safely and forcing them to do it more dangerously, or worst, use other forms of protection that will significantly damage the rock faces. You cannot stop rock climbing, but you can allow rock climbers to do what they love in a safe manner, and allow us to limit our risk. This measure will also cause a drop in attendance to our national parks, limiting the funding that could be used to keep a country looking beautiful.