Comments: I do not support the proposed directive. This would designate climbing bolts and anchors as banned permanent installations. It would place far too much power in the hands of individual superintendents. It would make us have to relitigate anchors and bolts that have stood for decades and routes that are a part of long standing tradition and fame in the climbing community.

I support a more democratic process where land managers must work with local climbing organizations to understand what is reasonable and least impactful, while supporting climbing's growing popularity, for example, with new routes or re-equipped routes.
