Comments: As a climber and lover of America's wilderness, I know I can speak for many other like me when I say that I would be distraught and inconsolable were the power to enjoy the unique natural beauty of places like Yosemite, the Wind Rivers, or Rocky Mountain threatened. The purpose of keeping climbing accessible is to more people will connect to the land in the unique and powerful way that climbing allows, and in so doing we will ensure a future generation of stewards of the land. Take that away and you will be alienating not only future generations from the land, but also the land from the people who will fight for it, care for it, and ensure that it stays the glorious wilderness it is. Protect America's History, protect America's wilderness, protect America's climbing.
