Comments: I am 16 and new to climbing. I dream of climbing many of the iconic climbs located within wilderness areas and following in the footsteps of the pioneers. When reading about these pioneers I have learned many of them were instrumental in the implementation of the wilderness system. It also seems that climbers are one of the biggest wilderness user groups and supporters of preserving these areas. While I am new to the sport it seems that trails, toilets, roads, hotels and other improvements have much more impact on wildlife and flora in these areas. Will you remove those next? These anchors are used not only by climbers but rescue groups, cavers, canyoneers. Please do not limit my generations ability to enjoy these areas safely. We will after all be the next generation of users who fight to protect them.
