Comments: Dear sir or madam:

I know of no installations or bolts or other items that are visible from any distance. So, the only people that actually see these items are the ones that need to use them for either climbing or canyon airing. I failed to see how this change in policy does anything but restrict people's access to our national parks. If all you want to do is try to keep the parks from being loved to death so to speak, and simply continuing the current policy of using more and more permits would seem to fit the bill and allow national parts and other income stream.
