Comments: No,

No permanent climbing bolts, anchors, or any other permanent aide may be left in a wilderness area.

No,

No horse shoeing stations, water tanks, ramadas, or any other permanent aide may be left in a wilderness area.

No,

No raft pumps, anchor lines, provisional docks, fire rings, or any other permanent aide may be left in a wilderness area.

These are wilderness areas to be left for the next hundred generations to enjoy. Do not focus on today's "convenience or political whims", but rather on the intent of the Wilderness Act itself, an endeavor to maintain a pristine opportunity for generations yet to come. Honor that! Even (real) climbers will thank you for that commitment.
