Comments: I want to submit a comment to distinguish that climbing anchors should be considered differently than built installations such as structures or campgrounds. In many ways, climbing anchors reduce the risk to land managers when considered as such because of the widespread support of safe climbing organizations to maintain fixed anchors when freely allowed to do so. Prohibiting such anchors increases the risk associated with climbing because it prohibits the safe maintenance of such anchors leading to possible decay of anchor bolts or botched replacements carried out by untrusted groups.
