Comments: In my hometown we access granite mountain wilderness area to climb the amazing granite cliffs. We only have a few bolted anchors or bolts period after the bolting legislation put in place in the 80s. Being able to replace hardware and maintain rappel stations for safe anchors at the top of a pitch and safe descents off the cliff are paramount. Chopping bolts without exact documentation of which bolts, which anchors on which routes your proposed legislation could lead to people getting onto a pitch and having no chance of being safe because they had no knowledge prior. This is just plain irresponsible and wrong to restrict access to the outdoors in such a way, while decreasing safety of those that want to explore both their limits and the limits the outdoors offers
