Comments: Restricting the establishment of new routes to "existing climbing opportunities" on non-Wilderness lands is unenforceable and will create confusion amongst land managers and climbers. Non-Wilderness climbing management policy should maintain opportunities for new anchors unless and until analyses determine climbing should be restricted to protect cultural and natural resources.

As someone who recently started climbing it as allowed me to get outdoors and enjoy a sport in a safe way. removing bolts is a way that limits access to the outdoors for climbers.
