Comments: Restricting the establishment of new routes to "existing climbing opportunities" on non-Wilderness lands is unenforceable and will create confusion amongst land managers and climbers. Non-Wilderness climbing management policy should maintain opportunities for new anchors unless and until analyses determine climbing should be restricted to protect cultural and natural resources. I am 60 years old, a retired army officer, an avid climber, and I love the preservation of the wilderness for everyone. Please do not enact these new policies.
