Comments: I am looking forward to sharing the mountains and the vertical world with my children, and my children's children for generations to come. Having the ability to engage in real Adventure in mountainss and wilderness is a bedrock foundation for the health and vitality of our society. Restricting anchors will have a devastating effect on the freedoms that we enjoy in the United States and will be a great loss for Society.

Restricting the establishment of new routes to "existing climbing opportunities" on non-Wilderness lands is unenforceable and will create confusion amongst land managers and climbers. Non-Wilderness climbing management policy should maintain opportunities for new anchors unless and until analyses determine climbing should be restricted to protect cultural and natural resources.
