Comments: Bolts and permanent anchors make rescue and climbing safely in wilderness areas more accessible and cleaner for future generations. Many times I have found a mess of nylon tat (garbage) from old slung anchors. Two or even sometimes one little bolt makes the world a difference in being able to keep myself and my partners safe in an otherwise avoidable instance. Not to mention the cleanliness of removing the need to leave our own primitive fixed anchors that are not useful after a few years from sun degradation. One bolt lasts sometimes more than 10 years when properly fixed. I think bolts in wilderness are the lesser of evils when faced with peoples safety and overall upkeep of our nations wilderness areas.
