Comments: The climbing community does well to steward the lands where climbing is found. This prohibition would give reason for climbers to because less invested in those areas. Climbing is a great pastime for us and our families and friends. Bolted anchors when installed properly and that are properly maintained, which the many climbing coalitions around our country do so well, are the safest means to climbing roped ascents. You would be doing yourself and all those who enjoy our national parks, climber or not, a great disservice by instituting this legislation.
