Comments: Hi,

I fully agree and understand your ambition of conserving and keeping the nature untouched. However, forbidding bolting is not the way forward. The climbing community is one of the strongest forces teaching common people of how to respect nature and by limiting their freedom you also limit the possibility for people to adopt a sustainable relationship with nature. One of the most effective ways of making people care about nature is putting people in nature to understand what to protect. Please reconsider your decision because the actual effects of your current decision is not working for nature!

Kind regards,

Felix Henriksson
