Comments: Please do not limit my rights as a climber. The climbing community has been successfully managing their anchors without issue for decades. Please let us to continue managing ourselves rather than land managers from an office. The impact of an anchor here and there enables numerous positive wilderness experiences for such minimal impacts. The average forest user wouldn't even be near a crag and wouldn't notice a bolt unless it were right in front of them. Please consult with experienced climbers, we are very much in a conservation mindset and value all users alike.
