Comments: I have been a rock climber in southern Arizona for the past 16 years. Climbing, particularly on Mount Lemmon, has had a huge impact on my life and played a big part in both shaping me into the person I am today and introducing me to a community of great people.

My love for climbing and this community has compelled me to give back in the form of donations and volunteer stewardship, and it has given me a deep respect for our public lands and a drive to protect them.

This proposal will put some of my most beloved climbing areas in jeopardy. If you proceed with this, it could have a negative impact on a lot of people's lives - the very people who are driven to respect and protect our forests.
