Comments: I think the policy to classify fixed anchors as "prohibited installations" should not be passed. I think they provide solutions to recreating safely and continue the great sport of rock climbing in beautiful areas. The U.S.A. takes pride in the legacy of sports and athletic achievements and in all honesty some of those achievements have been made possible through destroying land and creating courts or arenas or stadiums. Rock climbing is a sport that takes pride in respecting the environment, has minimal impact and has created a legacy in athletic achievements. I think being discerning about the impact that rock climbers and rock climbing activities have on the environment is important but shouldn't be assumed to be detrimental unless proven that it is. For years rock climbing and its methods for safety has given more to communities, outdoor exploration, and wilderness consideration than it has taken.
