Comments: I believe changes to protect our national forests from logging are not only a step forward, but also a necessary step to protect our wild lands and the habitat it provides for our native animals. America is a place of green space and wilderness that has been nearly destroyed in countries we call our peers. This is something we can learn from to protect our country from that which has happened to others. We owe it to future generations to leave them a country and a world they can live in proudly. Protecting our forests is protecting the future of America.
