Comments: This proposed legislation will negatively impact thousands of routes across the country in a blanket act. Climbing ethics and opinions vary greatly across the country based on location, cultural significance, history, and many other factors. Long standing agreements (written or otherwise) will be wiped out and nullified by this act. This will negatively impact many routes safety and ease of use. I suggest the restriction (or lack thereof) of the practice of bolting should be left to smaller jurisdictions to decide on due to the points above. It will better accommodate the landscape of this country as well as the respectful users of its public lands.
