

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 1/10/2024 2:02:26 PM

First name: Ben

Last name: LaCour

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Fixed anchors are an essential piece of climbers' safety system and are NOT prohibited "installations" under the Wilderness Act. Following existing climbing policies that allow judicious use of fixed anchors for more than a half century will do more to protect Wilderness character while providing for primitive and unconfined Wilderness climbing.

Anchors are in my personal opinion not much different than roads or campsites on Federal lands, in that they allow people to explore, appreciate, and access OUR Public lands. They are a part of the infrastructure of the site that allows us to experience it fully and safely.

It is unreasonable for federal agencies to create new guidance policies prohibiting Wilderness climbing anchors across the country when they have allowed, managed, and authorized fixed anchors for decades.

Prohibiting fixed anchors will create safety issues by imposing unnecessary obstacles to the regular maintenance of fixed anchors, a responsibility undertaken by the climbing community. Critical safety decisions often must be made in the moment and any authorization process should not impede those decisions. Fixed anchor maintenance needs to be managed in a way that incentivizes safe anchor replacement and does not risk the removal of climbing routes.

Whoever wrote this document is obviously not experienced in climbing. "Clean climbing" is one of the hardest, riskiest, and most deadly forms of climbing. Forcing people to "clean climb" will certainly increase fatalities.

Prohibiting fixed anchors obstructs appropriate exploration of Wilderness areas. Land managers need to allow climbers to explore Wilderness in a way that permits in-the-moment decisions that are necessary when navigating complex vertical terrain.

Prohibiting fixed anchors will threaten America's rich climbing legacy and could erase some of the world's greatest climbing achievements. Climbing management policy needs to protect existing routes from removal.

Restricting the establishment of new routes to "existing climbing opportunities" on non-Wilderness lands is unenforceable and will create confusion amongst land managers and climbers. Non-Wilderness climbing management policy should maintain opportunities for new anchors unless and until analyses determine climbing should be restricted to protect cultural and natural resources.