Comments: I encourage work, and particularly work that will aide in economic stimulation, and provide for local and or employment for private enterprises; to begin on the project as soon as possible. The actual effectiveness of the project in terms of forest health and fire resiliency, is yet to be determined. However, based upon prior projects such as Mad Ridge Fuel break, and the First 48, overall objectives and effectiveness, are left to personal opinion. Most importantly, local and private enterprise individuals must finally have an opportunity to pocket a few nickels and dimes from the large expanse and landmass that is the national forest system in Trinity County. Currently, within reason the only time a private man might be able to generate an income on the national forest is when it is going up in smoke, and none of the renewable natural resources will be utilized. Moreover, it is imperative that this project begin immediately as weather allows, and any other slated projects be brought to the table and be put to bid with the utmost urgency; and not be delayed. The economy, the people, and most of all the land of Southern Trinity has suffered far to long, from the agency submitting to the stifling chokehold of organizations objecting to essentially any activities or projects from taking place. The August Complex Restoration is an excellent example, as a dismal effort at best has been made to restore anything other than waste taxpayer funds and make a mess of the countryside. Lastly, it is imperative that all work goes to bid to solely private enterprise proprietors. That does not include the Watershed Center or the like. Granted they are employing individuals, but they are a non-profit organization, and they have no business bidding on, conducting work, or being involved in the inner workings of any activities funded by taxpayer dollars on public land. They have strong ties to a very large and powerful NGO, and thus it is not appropriate for the Watershed Center to be involved in business, or monies that should rightfully go to private enterprises that actually pay taxes and contribute to the economies.
